SKETCHES OF LITTLE OLD NEW YORK
BY O. O. McINTYRE
Telegram Bureau: Rooms 121-125 Hotel Majestic, West Seventy-second Street.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—A little man entered a restaurant in Broadway near Forty-first street the other afternoon and upended the cookies out of a large woman's hand and snatched hurriedly to the proprietor. Those who saw the incident did not understand. The fact is that the woman never should eat cakes that way and the indignation of the little man was well based. One more pie and she might have died right there. The woman, well dressed and large, ordered ten cakes, gorgeously frosted. Four minutes after she had received the order she ordered a lemon meringue pie and four cream puffs. She had just ordered the waiter to bring the French pastry tray when the little man entered and punched the tray upward.

"Look at my wife," he shouted, placing his index finger between the woman's eye. "She is full of pastry. What did I tell you? Good heavens! Does everybody conspire to make it hard for a woman in this city? Is there no helping hand ever? Look at her; she is packed."

"But dearie," began the woman. "Come home, you are full to the ears with pie. You cream puff scavenger trailer—oh, I'm going to break you of this pastry habit or editor sent him out to "shadow a negro who worked in the garbage department of the city."

"I was told," he writes, "to prove that carelessness on the part of drivers of garbage wagons was responsible for the infantile paralysis. Though the man I shadowed seemed to be an artist in his line, my paper proved that he wasn't. Perhaps he lost his job."

Martin Green, dean of New York reporters, declares the boy is quite, quite right. "For nothing," added Mr. Green, "angers a journalist so like falling down on a garbage assignment. One of the best garbage reporters I know quit newspaper work because, after trailing a garbage cart all over the city, the driver became angry and slapped him across the face with a dead cat lying atop the refuse."

I dropped into the Palace theater the other afternoon to see Larry Comer, who struggles under the burden of being "the Beau Brummel of Song." He is a big, strapping fellow and there may be slathers of actors who are more finished but Larry Comer appeals to me because of his devotion to his mother. She is sprightly despite her years, and wherever Larry is his mother may be found in the audience and always he sings to her.

After the theater they dine together with perhaps a friend or two and when he goes out over the circuit Mrs. Comer is always with him. He sang a song that went big. It was called "What's the Matter with the Irish?" It is strange, but I never knew a song with an Old Erin appeal that did not get a rousing response from New York theater goers. This song, however, has a stirring melody.

GERMAN LINER WILLEHAD WELCOMES U-BOAT BREMEN NEARING NEW LONDON

The Willehad in her dock at Boston.

The German liner Willehad, with several hundred tons of coal, has sailed from Boston through the Cape Cod canal, freshly provisioned and with a large crew, to serve as tender for the German U-boat Bremen and meet it at New London. The Willehad crept along the south shore to Sandwich and within its seventeen feet draught was able to negotiate the Cape Cod canal thence along Buzzard's Bay and into Long Island Sound without going beyond the three-mile limit at any point.
